

choose after fitting

The shaded strip is every population matching the data, and it is enormous. One point of it is picked, by leaning on the distribution we started from.

outline: all possible populations choose before fitting

The same strip. Restricting to a family first leaves only a short arc inside it, and the posterior spreads over that arc instead of sitting at a point.

shaded: those matching the published numbers